Replacement

Every electronic device suffers a reduction in value because it has been used for a certain period; this reduction in value is due to "depreciation". The Fair Market Value is determined based on when the device was purchased and the Purchase Price that is mentioned on the retailer invoice. It is important, as it would help us figure out the most optimal solution that can be provided to you.

Age of the device at the time of registering the Service Request

If at the time of raising the Service Request, the costs of repairs are greater than the Fair Market Value of the device, we would rather replace the device rather than repairing it. We will present you with the following options –

- 1) We will give you a replacement device reflecting the Fair Market Value of your current Gadgets & Appliances.
- 2) We will give you Gift Cards worth the Fair Market Value of your current device Gadgets & Appliances.
- 3) If you are attached to your Gadgets & Appliances and want to retain it, you can choose to pay the repair costs that are above its Fair Market Value.

For example, if you have purchased a phone worth Rs. 30,000 and breaks down in the 5th month. Let's assume that the cost of repairs is Rs. 25,000. Since the Fair Market Value of the phone at this time is Rs. 24,000, it makes more sense to replace the device than repair it. Hence, we will give you a replacement worth Rs. 24,000. If you are attached to your phone and do not wish to opt for a replacement, we will pay Rs. 24,000 and you can choose to pay the difference of Rs. 1,000 towards repairs.

For brands that do not repair the damaged Gadgets & Appliances but replace them, like what Apple does for some models of iPhones and iPads, we will provide the same replacement device to you.
